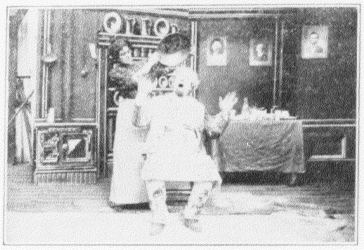
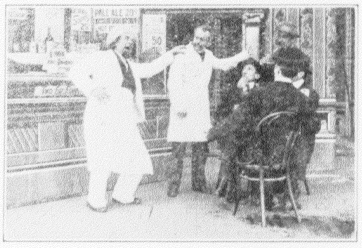
Such a Good Joke, But—

Why don't he laugh?

LENGTH, 375 FEET. PRICE, $41.25.



Mr. Bretzelman, the German baker, while delivering bread, sees two newsboys fighting whereby the little one licks a big tall fellow. This so amuses Mr. Bretzelman, that he describes the incident to everyone he meets. It is "such a good joke"—for Mr. Bretzelman.



He can not understand why his hearers do not relish the joke. He gets thrown out by the butcher, the grocer, the laundry man, the saloon keeper, and even his wife does not appreciate the good joke.

HOW THE MASHER WAS PUNISHED.

LENGTH, 375 FEET. PRICE, $41.25.

A lady is molested by a masher. She calls her husband. He is just going to turn the Masher over to the Police when a funny idea strikes him.

He makes the Masher sign a paper that he will do everything the husband may ask, until released.

When the irate husband meets the masher at the barber shop he commands him to have his mustache cut off and his head shaved.

When he meets him in company with ladies at a dinner he makes him dance upon the dinner table.

On the street he makes him ride in a boys' automobile, etc., etc.

At last when the husband thinks the masher fully punished he releases him of his contract to the great relief of the masher who will not forget so easily the lesson he received.
